Urban Landscapes Department Looks Forward to Beautifying

Residents can see 2014 Project Sites via Google Map

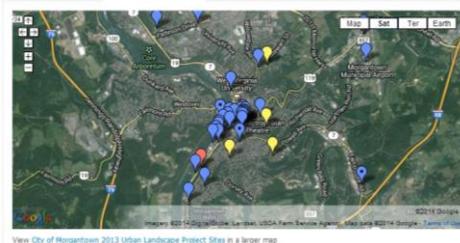

MORGANTOWN – As the last of the polar vortices melt away, the Urban Landscapes Department and Commission have already been working to prepare project sites for the upcoming growing season.

Marchetta Maupin, Urban Landscapes Superintendent, has been out in the intermittent nice weather last week.

“I’ve been pruning trees and shrubs in the City rights-of-way,” she shared. “This week, bucket trucks will replace the snowflakes with flower baskets on the High Street and Wharf District light poles.”

The City is also announcing an updated feature on MorgantownWV.gov: citizens will be able to identify project sites in their neighborhood and beyond on the 2014 Project Site Google Map, available on the Urban Landscapes Pages at <http://www.morgantownwv.gov/?p=3345>.

On the Urban Landscapes page, citizens can also see the approved list, and view a slideshow of 2013’s Project Sites.

The next steps will take place in April, as Maupin and her team fill baskets with liners and soil.

In May, those baskets will be planted, and remain in place through Fall.
